REASONS

- (A) The Claimants' claim includes significant elements of alleged harassment by speech/publication and the defendants are engaged in protest, engaging Articles 10/11. In light of this, and having regard to CPR Part 53.1(3), the claim ought to be assigned to the Media & Communications List. Experience shows that harassment by speech/publication requires a careful identification of acts alleged to constitute the course of conduct amounting to harassment and frequently generate disputed issues of fact. For these reasons, ~~Further~~ CPR PD 53B §10.2 disappies CPR 65.28(1)(a). Claims for alleged harassment by speech/publication, should be commenced under Part 7. I have therefore directed transfer of the proceedings and service of Particulars of Claim and associated directions.

- (B) The Claimants' Submissions contend that “the claim for an injunction does not allege or seek to suppress the publication of alleged defamatory statements, and is not concerned with publication of journalistic material”. This is not the definition of harassment by publication. The draft injunction order that the Claimants originally sought did seek to restrain publication of material on social media and sought other restrictions on freedom of expression that would have engaged s.12 Human Rights Act 1998 (as will almost always be the case with any injunction seeking to place restrictions on protest). The claim therefore “includes” a claim for harassment by publication within the terms of CPR 53.1. The submission that “this is not a matter which falls under paragraph 10.1 of CPR PD 53B” is not correct. “Publication” means communication to a reader or hearer other than the claimant: see Birmingham City Council -v- Afsar [2019] EWHC 1560 (QB) [60].
- (C) In any event, and leaving aside any technical arguments on the applicability of CPR 53.1 to the current claim, the real question is what is the best way to manage the claim to ensure that it is dealt with justly and at proportionate cost. This includes ensuring that the parties are on an equal footing and can participate fully in the proceedings. Active case management to secure these objectives includes identifying issues at an early stage and giving directions that ensure that the case proceeds quickly and efficiently. One of the principal ways in which the Court (and the parties) are able to identify the issues in the case is properly pleaded Particulars of Claim. Use of the Part 8 procedure, particularly in claims brought against multiple parties and raising issues that can reasonably be expected to be factually contentious, is likely to obstruct the early identification of issues and the fair and expeditious resolution of the proceedings. As against litigants in person, the Part 8 procedure is also likely to place a greater burden on them to identify the issues that arise than would be the case with a Part 7 claim and Particulars of Claim that identify (a) what each defendant is alleged to have done; and (b) the relief claimed against each defendant. I note the Claimants' suggestion that a Scott Schedule could be provided, I do not consider this to be an adequate substitute for properly pleaded Particulars of Claim.
- (D) I can presently see no ‘upsides’ in use of the Part 8 procedure (and none is identified in the Claimants' submissions) and several ‘downsides’. Even had it not been for the terms of CPR PD 53B §10.2, this claim is not suited to the Part 8 procedure. The overriding objective clearly favours an early transfer to Part 7 and the provision of Particulars of Claim that properly identify the particular allegations made against each Defendant (and comply with CPR PD 53B §10.3). Those Particulars of Claim, together with a draft of the injunction order that the Claimants seek, should be provided in good time before the return date on 4 October 2021.

- (E) The balance of the directions – including amendment of the directions given in the 20 August 2021 order – are to ensure that the Hearing is effective on the revised date of 4 October 2021. I have directed sequential exchange of skeleton arguments because most of the named defendants are unrepresented and fairness requires that they be given a longer opportunity to consider the Claimants' submissions and to respond to them.
- (F) I have considered the submission that the Claimants' Counsel "is now reasonably away during the court vacation". Although this is a factor to be considered, it cannot be determinative. The Claimants have brought an urgent application for an interim injunction before the Court during the vacation. They have been granted an interim injunction pending a return date. The proposal that the Court should postpone the decision regarding allocation to Part 7/Particulars of Claim to the hearing on 4 October 2021 would prevent the issues being properly pleaded and identified prior to the hearing. This is unsatisfactory and risks causing unfairness to the defendants. In light of the Claimants' difficulties with their Counsel, I have put the date by which the Particulars of Claim must be provided back to 17 September 2021. It cannot be later than this or the Defendants will not have an adequate time to consider and take advice on the claim and their position.
